Dear Highmark QUAD Participant,

Looking at the big picture, I've been feeling like a pretty lucky race director lately. Back in February, a little less than two weeks after the Highmark QUAD Ski Race took place at Peek'n Peak, the American Birkebeiner was scheduled to be held in Wisconsin. When it comes to cross-country ski races, the Birkie is the Big Boy with about 6,000 participants traveling to the remote town of Cable, Wisconsin for a 55 kilometer (about 33 mile) race distance. Where our snow was pretty superb, the Birkie course started to deteriorate rapidly in the days before the event. Race officials agonized over diminishing options and finally shortened the course to 20 kilometers and only allowed a competitive race for the small group of elite, world-class skiers in the event. The rest of the crowd was told they could ski the 20K course recreationally and no times would be recorded. I felt bad for that race director who, through no fault of his own, was likely feeling a lot of reflected heat from the skiers.

On April 16 the Boston Marathon took place and again I had sympathy pains for the people overseeing that event. The day of race forecast was for heavy rain, temperatures in the 40's and strong winds blowing into the face of the runners heading from the starting point in Hopkinton to the finish line in Boston. That's a lot for a race director to digest with close to 20,000 marathon minded runners of wide ranging abilities. While conditions were bad on race day they fortunately were not quite as dire as predicted but I imagine organizers didn't sleep well in the days prior to the event.

There is the lucky guy in charge of the Highmark QUAD Swim. I can certainly relate to the challenges of bad weather (it was just 2005 when a snowstorm disrupted the Swim Meet and don't even get me started on ski postponements) but the kickoff to the 25th year was a plain and simple joy. Where else can you watch a swim meet that ranges from incredible competition (imagine a group so elite that an amazing time of 49 seconds doesn't win the event nor finishes second) and even more incredible efforts just to complete the watery one hundred. The swim is without doubt not just a physical challenge but a mental one as well. I always point out that I've never known anyone that is afraid of running or biking but a lot of people have to overcome some serious water phobias to take on the challenge of the Highmark QUAD Swim. And also overcome a real case of nerves. Just like the ones quaking me as I got my turn on the starting blocks. Yeegads, what an experience. And despite my constant whining in the weeks prior, I sure was glad I did it. What a terrific feeling to be part of such an amazing and diverse group of people.

This QUAD thing . . . not so bad, you know?

Sincerely,

Craig Latimer
